

Heidemarie Uhl, Ph.D. is an historian of the Commission for Culture Studies and History of Theatre of the Austrian Academy of Sciences, lecturer at the University of Graz and board member of the Democracy Center. Associate of the CRC: "Modernity - Vienna and Central Europe by 1900" at the University of Graz; staff member of the research program "places of memory" at the Commission for Culture Studies and History of Theater (KKT) of the Austrian Academy of Sciences. Author of numerous articles, her major publications include: Between reconciliation and destruction. A controversy over Austria's historic identity, fifty years after the Anschluss, Vienna, Cologne, and Weimar (1992); Zeitgeschichtliche cultural monument in Graz and Styria from the end of the 19th Century to the present, Vienna, Cologne and Weimar (1994); Culture - Urbanity - Modern. Differentiations of modernity in Central Europe around 1900, Vienna (1999); and Modernity as a construction. Debates, discourses, positions in 1900, Vienna, (2001). Research priorities focus on memory research, dealing with Nazi past, the cultural studies theory, culture and identity in Central Europe around 1900.