

Prof. Steven T. Katz

Steven T. Katz is Director of the Elie Wiesel Center for Judaic Studies at Boston University and holds the Alvin J. and Shirley Slater Chair in Jewish and Holocaust Studies. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Cambridge [England] in 1972. Prior to coming to Boston he was a Professor of Near Eastern Studies (Judaica) at Cornell University, where he was Chair of the Department of Near Eastern Studies (1985-1988) and Director of the Jewish Studies Program (1985-1989). In addition to his regular teaching appointments at Dartmouth College (1972-1984) and Cornell University (1984 to 1996) he has been a visiting professor at numerous national and international universities, including Yale, the University of California at Santa Barbara, Yeshiva University, the University of Pennsylvania, the Hebrew University, Jerusalem, Shandong University, China, and was a Visiting Scholar at Harvard University on three separate occasions. He is a member of the Academic Committee of the United States Holocaust Museum, and also chairs the Holocaust Commission of the Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture. Having served for ten years as one of the American representatives to the International Task Force on Holocaust Education, sponsored by the European Union, he is presently serving as the Academic Advisor to this organization.